First and Last.

"Just tell me dear," she said—
And seemingly the ... upon them.
And shyly dropped the modest head
Beside his own—
"But tell me have you loved before?
Or once, or more?"

The eager sparkling face
Was full of tender, trusting grace,
She did not fear his answer then,
Her king of men!
"But tell me dear, the best and worst,
Or am I first?"

He turned his eyes away;
Yet closer still her hand he pressed,
Her answer yes or nay:
A blush confessed
All, in one burning word,
Unsaid, unheard.

Quick came a burst of tears—
A tempest from an April sky—
And then, "Forgive my doubts and fears."
He heard her sigh;
"Why should I care what loves are past,
So mine is last?"

LADIES' COLUMN.

Fashion Notes.

—Two-toned and cane-colored gloves are fashionable.

—Wreaths of real water-lilies are used to trim evening dresses.

—Raspberry cream is a new color, and is neither pretty nor becoming.

—Rough satin and cream Tuscan straw hats have won most favor in France.

—The golden rule of dressing now is to use bright color, but to use it sparingly.

—The Lyons manufacturers are at work on brocades of one color with immense figures.

—Foulard wrappers made up without lining are the coolest possible gowns for morning wear.

—Bronze silks in wide and narrow stripes of satin on a silk ground are used for overdresses.

—The Queen Anne mitt has stripes going around the arm instead of lengthwise and is very ugly.

—Silk gauze overdresses, embroidered in gold thread and made up over white silk, are worn in the evening.

—Neckties bordered with white fringe and worked in white silk, are imported from Smyrna for American wearers.

—Ropes of artificial flowers are used to loop curtains, but they are too suggestive of the milliner's shop to be pretty.

—Lined sunshades with pinked edges are made to order, but are rarely found in the shops. They are exceedingly pretty.

—A new fashion, borrowed from some of the pictures of Rubens, is to tie each of the curved draperies on the sides of a gown with a bow.

—Irish point lace is one of the new stuffs used for bridal veils. It is not light enough for the purpose, but is worn for sweet charity's sake.

—Lace curtains last twice as long and look much prettier when lined with bright color. A finely plaited frill of the lining makes a good trimming.

—Buttons in the shape of shells appear as fastenings on the newest waterproofs, and the capes are trimmed with shells in imitation of a palmer's dress.

Where Men Find Wives.

Where do men usually discover to women who afterwards become their wives is a question we have occasionally heard discussed, and the custom has invariably become of value to young lady readers. Chance has much to do in the affair, but then there are important governing circumstances. It is certain that few men make a selection from ball-rooms, or any other places of public gaiety, and nearly as few are influenced by what may be called showing off in the streets, or by any allurements of dress. Our conviction is that ninety-nine hundredths of all the finery with which women decorate or load their persons go for nothing, so far as husband-catching is concerned. Where, and how, then, do men find their wives? In the quiet homes of their parents or guardians—at the fireside, where the domestic graces and feelings are alone demonstrated. These are charms which most surely attract the high as well as the humble. Against these all the finery and airs in the world sink into insignificance.

We shall illustrate this by an anecdote, which, though not new, will not be the worse for being again told:—In the year 1773, Peter Burrell, Esq., of Beckenham, in Kent, whose health was rapidly declining, was advised by his physicians to go to Spa for the recovery of his health. His daughters feared that those who had only motives entirely mercenary would not pay him that attention which he might expect from those who, from duty and affection united, would feel the greatest pleasure in ministering to his ease and comfort; they therefore resolved to accompany him. They proved that it was not a spirit of dissipation and gaiety that led them to Spa, for they were not to be seen in any of the gay and fashionable circles; they were never out of their father's company, and never stirred from home except to attend him either to take the air or drink the waters—in a word, they lived a most recluse life, in the midst of a town then the resort of the most illustrious and fashionable personages of Europe. This exemplary attention to their father procured these three amiable sisters the admiration of all the Englishmen at Spa, and was the cause of their elevation to that rank in life to which their merits gave them so just a title. They all were married to noblemen—one to the Earl of Beverley, another to the Duke of Hamilton, and afterwards to the Marquis Exeter, and a third to the Duke of Northumberland. And it is justice to them to say that they reflected honor on their rank, rather than derived any from it.

Marriages in England at Night.

No marriage of this kind can take place in England except under the signed fiat and special license of the Archbishop of Canterbury, first petitioned for and obtained. The grant or refusal rests entirely in the discretion of the Primate, who is said to enter into every detail himself. By No. 102 of the "Constitution and Canons of the Church of England" of 1603 (now in force) it is ordained that all ordinary marriages shall be celebrated between the hours of ten and twelve in the forenoon, and the same canon law has since been confirmed by various acts of Parliament, and is to be found reaffirmed by the marriage act of George IV.'s reign. The collective wisdom of Parliament from time to time deemed it wise to provide against the accident of foolish young or old men, of all classes, being persuaded to celebrate marriage late in the day, after, perhaps, partaking of the bottle freely at banquets and suppers. Also the debates in Parliament show that it was held that the marriage service was not a thing to be thoughtlessly and lightly entered upon. It is likewise generally understood that the canons cannot be altered without royal license from the Queen issued to the Canterbury and York Convocations, who must be unanimously agreed as to any change.

Hired Dresses.

To what shifts will women resort who are really fond of dress! In our large cities it is quite customary for ladies to hire costumes in which to attend balls. "We have various kinds of costumes," said one of these costumers. "Sometimes a lady from another city, staying at a hotel, wants to go to a ball, and she comes to me. ..."

HOME DOCTOR.

—A Boston physician states, as the result of his experience, that the use of high-heeled boots causes injury to the eyes, not only weakening the sight, but producing a sensation of constant pain.

A physician has given four rules which it would be well to accept and act upon. 1. Do not drink cold water immediately after exercising. 2. Eat something before drinking. 3. Drink in small swallows. 4. Do not drink much at once.

—Dr. Morgan states that he has often promptly relieved the distressing earache of children by filling the bowl of a common new clay pipe with cotton wool, upon which he dropped a few drops of chloroform, and inserting the stem carefully into the external canal, and adjusting his lips over the bowl, blew through the pipe, forcing the chloroform vapour upon the membrana tympani.

TREATMENT OF MALARIAL FEVER.—The interesting and important statement is made in the medical journals of the treatment, by means of iodine, of more than three hundred cases of intermittent fever successfully by Dr. Wadsworth, of Saltillo, Mexico. He has records of 250 of these cases, many of them being chronic, extending over various intervals of weeks or months. In the severe cases, ten to fifteen grains of quinine were given at first, followed by compound tincture of iodine, Mx. to Mxv.; in the severest cases arsenic was added. In every instance the paroxysm was arrested within twenty-four hours, and twelve doses, or four days of treatment, were sufficient to guarantee a cure, with the exception of six relapses on the fourteenth day, one on the twenty-first, and one on the seventh.

THE SEX OF SKULLS.—Anatomists give very discordant directions for determining the sex of skulls. In a great many cases it cannot be determined. The female skull, as a rule, is smaller than the male, and, moreover, the jaws and prominences of the face are less developed; consequently the brain case, though smaller than in man, is larger in proportion to the face. Dr. Le Bon gives some very curious statistics concerning the capacities of female skulls. There is no question that the differences in skull and brain between the sexes increase with the degree of civilization; but it is astonishing that while the skulls of male Parisians are among the largest, those of the women are remarkably small; they are even smaller than those of the women of Polynesia, and but little above those of the women of New Caledonia. This is a fact not easy to account for.

Warm Weather Diet.

The first warm days are fruitful of complaints about the failure of the appetite. Breakfasts no longer relished, dinners afford but a languid interest, and suppers seem superfluous. Only vigorous workers out of doors, or young people who are so blessed as not yet to have made the acquaintance of their stomach come to the table with a real zest for food. And it is no wonder considering how few people have learned the art of altering their diet to suit their conditions and the state of the season. The spring appetite fails and ought to fail before ham and and eggs or a great piece of steak, on these enervating first warm mornings of the year. Rich soups, heavy meats, and all stimulating and blood-making articles of diet, that met a real want in the nipping and eager air of winter, are as much out of the place now as the furs and ulsters. And yet many a person who would think it a sign of lunacy to dress in the December style in May, does not appear to see any incongruity in eating in the December fashion. Food and coal create heat, thick clothing and tight houses preserve it for the comfort of the body in winter. Yet men who know enough to damp their furnaces, open the windows, and lay off their overcoats on the advent of spring, are stupid enough to keep on stoking their stomachs at full blast, and consider themselves "out of sorts" and ill, if nature resents the abuse.

It is time to let up on the cold weather diet especially for persons doomed to live indoors. A meal of well-cooked oat-meal, served cold with cream and sugar, with two or three oranges and a cup of coffee, makes an adequate and appetizing breakfast. All fruit and vegetables obtainable fit it well at this season. The many preparations of the small grains afford a variety which it is well to study. Milk and eggs and fish contain all the needed food elements for a diet for a month or two, with such sugar and starch as the housewife combines in the toothsome light pudding or other desserts. Whether we eat to live or live to eat, we ought to be rational enough to dispense with food when not hungry, and to tempt rather than force the appetite.

What an Old Woman Heard.

A droll mistake was made by an imaginative old dame, who, having permitted a telegraph pole to be placed on the top of her house, waited upon the chief of the telegraphic company concerned to complain that she could get no sleep of a night, being kept awake by the noise made by the messages passing over her head. "I don't think, sir," said she, "you can't be aware of all that's said along them wires. There's a deal that hadn't ought to be. I can assure you, sir, that very much that's said there, that I have to lie and listen to, is such as no decent woman ought to hear; and I hope you will put a stop to it." The amused gentleman was hardly able to meet the accusation with due gravity; but he did contrive to keep his countenance while he informed the old lady that the young men who hitherto worked the wires were under notice of dismissal, and that in future only young women of great respectability would be employed, so there would be no danger of impropriety being flashed any longer.

How Illinois was Bought.

In the year 1773 the State of Illinois was bought of ten Indian chiefs, representing ten tribes, by twenty-two white men in Pennsylvania and England. The territory was in two tracts, one called Southern Illinois, and the other the balance of the State a portion of Southern Wisconsin. The consideration was 2,500 blankets, 250 blankets, 300 shirts, ...

Paid Him His Own Measure.

Righteous punishment comes sooner or later to jesters and practical jokers. They should expect it any time. Says a contemporary:

Years ago, in Penobscot, Me., there lived a man by the name of H—, whose greatest pleasure was in tormenting others. His own family were generally the butts of his sport. One cold and blustering night, he retired to bed at an early hour, his wife being absent at a neighbor's. Some time after, she, on returning, finding the door closed, demanded admittance.

"Who are you?" cried Mr. H—.

"You know who I am! Let me in—it's very cold."

"Begone, you strolling vagabond! I want nothing of you here!"

"But I must come in!"

"What is your name?"

"You know my name—it is Mrs. H—!"

"Begone! Mrs. H— is a very likely woman. She never keeps such late hours as this!"

"If you don't let me in," replied Mrs. H—, "I will drown myself in the well!"

"Do, if you please," he replied.

She then took a log and plunged it into the well, and returned to the side of the door. Mr. H—, hearing the noise rushed from the house to save, as he supposed, his drowning wife. She at the same time, slipped in and closed the door after her. Mr. H—, almost nude, in turn demanded admittance.

"Who are you?" she demanded.

"You know who I am. Let me in, or I shall freeze!"

"Begone, you great rogue! I want nothing of you here!"

"But I must come in!"

"What is your name?"

"You know my name. It is Mr. H—."

"Mr. H— is a very likely man—he don't keep such late hours."

Suffice it to say, she, after keeping him in the cold until she was satisfied, opened the door and let him in.

Two Laws.

Several days ago a white man was arraigned before a colored justice down the country on charges of killing a man and stealing a mule.

"Wall," said the Justice, "de facts in dis case shall be weighed wid carefulness, an' ef I hangs yer taint no fault ob mine."

"Judge, you have no jurisdiction only to examine me."

"Dat sorter works 'longs ter de regular justice, but you see I'se been put on as a special. A special has de right ter make a moof at S'preme Court ef he choose ter."

"Do the best for me you can, Judge."

"Dat's what I'se gwine ter do. I'se got two kinds ob law in dis Court, de Arkansaw an' de Texas law. I generally give a man de right to choose for his self. Now what law does yer want: de Texas or de Arkansaw?"

"I believe I'll take the Arkansas."

"Well, in dat case I'll dismiss yer for stealin' de mule"—

"Thank you, Judge."

"An' hang yer for killin' de man"—

"I believe Judge that I'll take the Texas."

"Well, in dat case I'll dismiss yer for killin' de man"—

"You have a good heart, Judge."

"An' hang yer for stealin' de mule. I'll jist take de 'casion heah ter remark dat de only difference 'tween de two laws is de way yer state de case."—Little Rock Gazette.

Evading a Fare.

The stealing of a pin is apparently a slight offence. Yet it may reveal character as clearly as the theft of $100. Some years ago there lived in New York a shrewd old merchant named Aymar. He used to receive cargoes of mahogany and logwood, which were sold at auction.

On one occasion a cargo was to be sold at Jersey City, and all hands started from the auctioneer's store to cross the ferry. When they were going through the gate, Mr. Aymar noticed one of the largest buyers slip through the gate without paying the five cents fare. He told the auctioneer not to take a bid from that man.

"Why," said the auctioneer with an expression of surprise, "I thought he was good."

"So did I," answered Mr. Aymar; "but I have changed my mind, and I will not trust him $1."

A few months proved the accuracy of the judgment of Mr. Aymar, for the slippery merchant failed, and did not pay five cents on the dollar. It does not, by any means, follow that business disaster will come as a retribution to a dishonest ...

CHAPTER XXVII.

IN THE AMPHITHEATRE.

Stefano Beni, shaping the spokes of a cartwheel in the great archway which served him for a workshop, found his light obscured, and without looking round, said,

"Is that you, Matteo?"

"It is not Matteo, uncle,—Pretty Tito: good Tito!"

And Giulietta put down her basket, that she might respond to the greetings of Tito, a magnificent black cat that lived and had his being in Uncle Stefano's workshop.

"You here, my niece? Is anything the matter?"

"Only a job for you, Uncle Stefano. I have just seen Padre Anselmo, and he bade me tell you that the tire came off his near wheel as he drove in this morning from Montorio; and he wants it put to rights immediately."

"That tire again? Body of Bacchus! One can not go on patching it forever. Luigi said last time that the metal was as rotten as tinder. He must have a new one."

(Luigi was the blacksmith under the next archway.)

"He says he can not afford a new one yet awhile."

"The old story"—waiting, I suppose, till I make him a new wheel, or Luigi puts him a tire, for nothing. Ugh! these priests! Grasp all and grudge all—that's their motto."

La Giulietta, sitting on the floor with Tito in her lap, looked up quickly.

"You are quite right, Uncle Stefano," she said, with a somewhat heightened color. "The motto fits padre Anselmo like a glove. You remember last winter how he went from house to house, begging meal from one, oil from another, rice from another; how he got whole sheep and goats from the farmers about Montorio; and how he distributed bread and soup and alms to the sick and the hungry? You remember how old Caterina told us that he himself never tasted meat for weeks together, but gave all his poultry, and the last bottle of wine in his cellar, to the poor of his parish? Then look at his coat—threadbare and patched. I should be ashamed to see you, Uncle Stefano, in a coat half as shabby. Yes, you are quite right. 'Grasp all and grudge all'—that is his motto; but you forgot to add that he grasps all for others, and grudges all to himself."

Stefano Beni—a sallow, hard-featured Lombard—looked up with an odd twinkle in his eye, and leaning on his mallet, said, "If I ever get into trouble, you shall put on the wig and gown; for I'll be hanged if you're not the best special pleader in Verona."

The girl put Tito down, and jumping up, leaned her clasped hands caressingly on the old man's shoulder.

"A good pleader wins his cause," she said; "and so the little uncle will put a new tire on Padre Anselmo's wheel."

"I!—I put on a new tire? Nonsense, child. Am I a blacksmith?"

"You are a dear, good, clever wheelwright, little uncle; and it is the wheelwright's business to get the tire put on, even though he does not put it on with his own hands. You know I can not ask Luigi for the tire, so poor as he is, and with so many mouths to feed. He will put it on for nothing, good old Luigi; but the little uncle will pay for the iron."

"Now may the devil fly away with me if—"

"If you refuse to do a good turn for a good man? Ah, but you are not going to refuse, uncle mio. Shall I ask Luigi to send for the wheel?"

"Where is the carretta?"

"At the Golden Sun. Padre Anselmo always puts up at the Golden Sun."

"Humph! Matteo will be back presently; he can fetch it."

"There is my own good, kind—"

"Pardon, Neighbor Beni, your servant, Signorina Giulietta," said a husky voice in the doorway.

It was a very small, withered, feeble-looking old man, in spectacles, and a woolen nightcap, and a shabby snuff-colored coat reaching to his heels. His name was Cibi, and he was custodian of the Amphitheatre. He also sold curiosities, and wrote "Antiquario" over the door of the archway that served him for porter's lodge, shop, dwelling, "kitchen and all." His stock in trade consisted of Etruscan and Roman relics grubbed up by himself in the subterranean of the Amphitheatre, or found from time to time by the peasantry round about.

"There is a party of travellers just driven up," he said, "and I have a customer looking through my stock, a real connoisseur, who means buying. If I send him away, he is sure not to come back again; and seeing the Signorina Giulietta—"

"You came to ask me to show the Arena for you? With pleasure, Signor Cibi; it will not be the first time, will it? Give me the keys, and I will go at once. ..."

SATURDAY, AUGUST 7, 1880.

Princess Louise and Prince Leopold sailed from Quebec on Saturday last per str. Polynesian. They will be met at Liverpool by H.R.H. Prince of Wales.

Mr. Gladstone is suffering from a severe indisposition, and his condition is a cause of natural anxiety. His illness is said to have been caused by too close application to the public business, and the strain of constant attendance upon the sessions of the House of Commons.

A serious misunderstanding is likely to arise between the United States and Spain, over repeated indignities, which have lately been offered to American merchant marine in Cuban waters, by a captain of the Spanish navy, boarding and searching the vessels. The American government has formally presented the case to Spain, and demanded reparation.

The gratifying announcement is made that there is a steady increase in the receipts of the Government railways of the Dominion, as well as those owned by corporations. The customary deficit in the financial exhibit of the Intercolonial shows a very marked decrease. This announcement will be greeted with satisfaction, as these institutions have heretofore been a grievous tax upon the public exchequer.

The Gladstone government has yielded to the pressure of public opinion as expressed in the House, and recalled Sir Bartle Frere from the governorship of the Cape of Good Hope. The egregious blunders which have marked his administration in South Africa, and which have very nearly resulted in another rebellion, would have caused his removal months ago. A judicious appointment to the vacancy may tide over the difficulties which are looming up in that part of the empire.

Rev. Wm. Hanford, the much besmirched clergyman of Toronto, had the cheek to preach twice in Albert Hall, Toronto, on Sunday last. Most people were inclined to allow his name to sink into becoming oblivion, after the recent damaging disclosure by his partner in infamy, but when he persists in brazening it the scandal by sheer bravado, it is time that he was relegated to the position to which disgraceful conduct has entitled him by the righteous indignation of outraged community. As a minister of the christian religion, and a teacher of social morality, "his usefulness is gone," and he ought to be made to feel it.

The rumor that Sir Garnet Wolseley has been appointed to the chief command of the forces in India is hailed with satisfaction throughout the Empire. His success in stamping out rebellion on other important occasions, and his firmness in upholding the dignity and enforcing the power of England's authority, have gained for him the confidence of Englishmen in every part of the globe. His appointment to the Indian command at the present important crisis would go far to settle all anxiety in the future of the Afghanistan trouble. Sir Garnet has always been loth to accept a position in this service, having had some experience with the Indian climate, which is particularly obnoxious to him. He has however signified his intention of proceeding to the East if his services are required.

It would appear that the powers of Europe are gradually but surely drifting into war. Turkey persistently refuses to comply with the demand of the Berlin conference, and is hastily preparing to defend the territory which it was decided to cede to Greece. The powers seem determined that the decision of the conference shall be carried out, and the arrangements for the carrying out of the proposed naval demonstration in Turkish waters are being proceeded with, the command of the squadron being accorded to a British admiral. That the demonstration may suddenly be transformed from an imposing show to a decided and decisive action, is only too well understood by the powers interested. For this reason, France is apparently holding back, evidently regarding the pretentions of Germany with a suspicious eye. But she can scarcely refuse to take part in the demonstration after being one of the powers at the Berlin conference, to guarantee that the claims of Greece should not be overlooked. Steps have already been taken for the mobilization of the Grecian army, in anticipation of the declaration of war, but at the request of the powers, the work has been stayed for a few days, to allow of further negotiations with Turkey. If the Sultan continues in his obstinate mood, it does not require a prophet to foretell that he and his government will very speedily be bundled out of Europe, "bag and baggage."

Gen. Burrows' Defeat.

THE TRUE STORY OF THE CANDAHAR DISASTER.

London, Aug. 5.—The Times has the following from Candahar:—

"Aug. 2, by Indo-European Telegraph Company, via Teheran.

"On the morning of July 27, General Burrows engaged Ayoob Khan's force of 12,000 men and twenty guns, fifty miles beyond Candahar. After four hours' severe fighting, [illegible] gained and forced to retreat to Candahar. The British loss was twenty officers, and 400 Europeans, and 800 natives killed and missing, most of the losses occurring in the retreat. The horse artillery guns were abandoned. Preparations are being made for a siege in Candahar."

The Times says the foregoing news was brought in by native messengers, from Candahar, and telegraphed from Kila-Abdulla, a post forty-four miles on the Candahar side of Quettah. The Times adds:—"We may assume that the messengers left Candahar on Saturday. We now learn for the first time General Burrows was the assailant. As the Afghans do not take prisoners, we fear all the missing may be reckoned as killed. The upshot of the story is that of 2,400 men not more than half—some of whom are wounded—followed General Burrows into Candahar."

ABDURRAHMAN'S ILL FAITH.

A Bombay despatch says:—Before the telegraph wire communicating with Cabul was cut, a message was received thence stating that the durbar which was to have been held on Monday at Kila-i-Hadji had been postponed, and it was quite uncertain whether it would be held at all. The supposed hitch has arisen from the evident distrust of the Ameer, and his reluctance to venture within the British camp.

THE FEELING IN INDIA.

A despatch from Bombay says the Europeans there are not slow in again stigmatizing the pusillanimous conduct of the authorities in not avenging the murder of Major Cavagnari. At the same time it avers that a thorough persevering, and trenchant action was throughout used by Lord Lytton, and had this been adopted, surprises and their concomitant disasters would have been little heard of, and assuredly General Burrows' surprise not attempted. All are of one opinion that the government of India must be wrested at any sacrifice from any home interference if the empire is to be retained under the British flag.

A Husband's Discovery.

ANIMATED NIGHT SCENE IN THE HOUSE OF A MONTREAL CITIZEN.

Montreal, Aug. 2.—A few days ago a young French Canadian gentleman, well known and highly esteemed as a man of honor, a resident of St. Hubert street, had occasion to go into the country for a time on a pleasure excursion, leaving his wife and children at home. He returned hastily the same evening, and upon trying the door found it locked. He rapped, and waited for a time, expecting his wife to go down and admit him. He noticed at the same time a light in his bed room. At length it flashed upon him that burglars might be in the house, and without more ado he burst in the door and rushed into his room. He could see no one, but the light was turned on and the bed had been recently vacated. He tried one door after the other, and then came to the ward-robe. Opening the the door, he discovered, to his utter bewilderment, a man and woman in a semi-nude state. The woman was his wife; the man a doctor well kown in French Canadian circles. But a still greater horror awaited him for upon dragging the man into the light he discovered that he was his wife's uncle. The wife screamed, and the Doctor implored mercy, "Pour le bon Dieu!" The enraged and outraged husband siezed a rifle and demanded which one of them he should kill first, as both should die. They fell upon their knees and implored mercy for their conduct; the woman adding that if only for their children's sake, her husband should not place his own fredom in peril. This appeal stayed the hand of the husband, and bundling the pair into the streets as they stood, he locked the door, and informed the nearest police that there were to be found at a certain street, in a gateway, a man and woman who wanted some clothes to cover their nakedness. The husband is a military man, and has seen service in Italy and France.

Dr. Tanner's Fast.

New York, Aug. 4.—Dr. Tanner last evening expressed himself as feeling first-rate, and little doubt is now felt as to his accomplishing his forty days fast. He drank but two-thirds of a pint of water during the previous twenty-four hours, and at midnight was apparently sleeping soundly.

The doctor entered on the thirty-eighth day of his fast at noon to-day in an enfeebled condition, but, backed by his immense will power, he will probably succeed in holding out until Saturday noon, when the time expires. The climax has been reached now, his physicians say, and the strain on his mind and body is something beyond comprehension. Tanner is troubled somewhat by irritation of the throat, which is relieved by gargling ice water. He will not attempt any more carriage drives or pedestrian exercises. He drank considerable water to-day.

As the last day of the fast approaches, and in anticipation of a great rush of contributions to the doctor's table, the following notice has been posted in the hall:—"Visitors are requested to leave water melons with the watches only." Evidently the doctor's fast will not prove fruitless. A number of offers have been made to secure his services as a lecturer when he recovers. A Chicago firm offers $1,000 per week for twenty weeks, and a New York gentleman has offered $900 per week for an indefinite period.

A Customs Scandal.

New York, Aug. 3.—Col. Bodine, of the American rifle team, who arrived at New York from Europe on Sunday, brought with him a long rifle case. The case was said not to contain dutiable goods, but in it when opened were found a variety of articles, consisting of two pairs of kid gloves, six pairs of ladies' silk scarfs and three rolls of black silk, 124 yards in all. The goods and the case of rifles were seized by the customs authorities. It is said that when the American team returned after their first victory at Dollymount they brought crates and barrels of fine articles purchased on the other side, all of which were admitted here free of duty. Col Bodine explains that he assumed the customs authorities would follow the rule adopted regarding the baggage of previous teams, and let it pass without inspection.

Bowen's Surprise.

To the Editor of the Beaver.

Dear Sir,—In answer to Mr Bowen's surprise expressed in your issue of last week, permit me to say to those who do not know the man, that he signed the card of thanks in my office in presence of William Pringle and R. A. Johnston, and paid one dollar to have it inserted in the newspapers of Napanee. [illegible]

Pushing Business.

John Kingsbury has been appointed special guardian of the bovine vagrants of the town, with orders to cage all animals found at large in Elisha Ruff's lunch house. $3 per week and pickings is the salary. He is also commissioned to look after unticketed dogs.

Grange Co-operative Store.

A meeting of the stockholders of the Grange Co-operative Company will be held in the Town Hall, Napanee, on Saturday, 14th inst., to consider the advisability of winding up the affairs of the company. It is rumored that there is a possibility of the managers opening out a similar business in Toronto.

The Game Laws.

The game laws of this Province, as amended at the last session, provide that the season for hunting woodcock shall open on August 1st, snipe, black and grey ducks, wood ducks and wild geese on August 15th, partridge and hares on September 1st, and deer on October 1st. The penalties for destroying game out of season are very heavy.

Champion Pedestrianism.

Messrs Fulford Button and Fred. Miller have been spending a few days rusticating north of Tamworth, possibly hunting for the Beaver Lake "serpent" and on Wednesday walked from that village to Napanee—distance twenty-two miles. They are said to have [illegible] as fresh as daisies, they [illegible] probably not care to repeat the performance this week.

Shipping Ashes.

On Sunday morning last the steam barge [illegible] arrived in the harbor with two other [illegible] for the purpose of loading [illegible] for the American market. The barges [illegible] loaded from the asheries of Charles [illegible] Carscallen and S. Mel. Detlor [illegible] destined for Connecticut, where they [illegible] ready sale among the farmers at about [illegible] per bushel. The price realized here [illegible] about half a cent.

Barn Burned.

On Sunday morning a barn owned by Mrs. [illegible], a widow, on the fourth concession of Richmond, and used by Robert Anderson, was destroyed by fire at two o'clock, together with 300 bushels of barley, seven tons of hay, a cutter, a lumber sleigh, two sets of lumber harness, drags, cultivators, fanning mill, and harvest tools. One span of horses and two cows were lost, and two more were badly burned. The contents of the building were insured for $[illegible] in the Watertown Agricultural Insurance Company. The barn is insured for $[illegible] in the London Mutual Insurance Company. The cause of the fire is a mystery.

Napanee Cemetery.

Mr. Thos. Hughes, P. L. S. and C. E., has lately been engaged in laying off a number of lots in the Napanee Cemetery. It is, we believe, the intention of the Cemetery Company, at an early day, to offer these and other lots at public auction, so as to furnish an opportunity to all who may feel disposed to invest in this description of property. The Athletic Contest.

The athletic contest between Boyd, of Napanee, and McLaughlin, of Kingston, will come off at Napanee to-day (Saturday) about 2.30 P. M., on Centre street. A stubborn [illegible] may be looked for.

The Market.

For several weeks past the market has been very slow, farmers being busy with work on their farms. On Saturday last the attendance was very fair and prices reasonable. Butter is the only commodity that ranges "high," that article retailing at 20 cents.

Liberal.

At the regular meeting of Excelsior Fire Brigade, a yearly grant of $10 was voted for the support of a band in Napanee. This considering the very small salary granted to members of the brigade, is very liberal. The boys were always a whole-souled lot of fellows.

Reliable Information.—You will find quantity, quality and prices always all right at W. H. Bruton's.

Matrimonial.

An interesting matrimonial event took place in Adolphustown on Monday last, being the marriage of Miss Sarah M., eldest daughter of R. J. Collins, Esq., to Mr. John Laird, of Picton. There were about sixty guests present, the ceremony being performed by Rev. J. Stewart, of Morven. The happy couple took the steamer Alexandra for Montreal on their wedding trip. We add ours to the host of other congratulations to the newly wedded pair.

Encampment.

At the regular meeting of Napanee Camp, No. 16, I. O. O. F., held on July 30th, the following officers were installed by Bro. W. N. Honey, P. C. P.:

Bro. Guy C. Baker, C. P.
" J. C. Martin, S. W.
" D. Henwood, H. P.
" E. Clapp, J. W.
" R. R. [illegible], Treas.
" J. A. Reid, Scribe.
" H. A. Stewart, O. S.
" W. N. Honey, I. S.
" A. Twomey, Guide.

The Band.

We are pleased to be informed that the prospects for having a band organized in Napanee are very favorable. On Monday evening an informal meeting was held, and a number of names enrolled to become members, and we are informed that there are thirteen eligible musicians under promise to join the organization. There are a number of instruments about town the property of the corporation, which with those owned by private parties, who will probably become members, will be sufficient to start with, and there is little doubt that the band will soon be an established fact.

Discovered, but not Found.

Last week we noticed that Messrs Harris & Empey were on track of the man that stole a horse and rig from them this spring. Mr. Empey followed the man to Syracuse, he having been extradited on a charge of horse stealing and where he is now awaiting his trial on several counts. Mr. E. at once identified the man as the one who had got the start of him, and the [illegible] then made an open confession. He had taken the horse to Montreal, and [illegible] the yard of Mr. W. N. Kinnear's hotel. Mr. Empey is now in that city endeavoring to find the animal and buggy, but word was received on Thursday [illegible] that he has little hope of being successful in his search, as no trace of the horse can be found after the above took place.

Those Dead Shad.

Various theories have been advanced as to the cause of the great mortality among the small fish, usually called "shad," which have made their appearance in such numbers in Lake Ontario during the past year or two. Seth Green the Rochester fish authority has added his observations to the many opinions [illegible] already advanced. He says they are not young shad but belong to the shad family, and are known as alewives, and he is at a loss to account for their appearance in Lake Ontario in such numbers. He is convinced that the large mortality is the result of starvation. They move about in large schools, those at the head of the procession eat everything that suits the alewife taste, leaving nothing for those that bring up the rear and they consequently die by thousands.

Excursion.

The Oddfellows of Napanee have completed arrangements for a grand excursion to Wells Island to come off on Friday 20th inst. The steamer [illegible] has been chartered for the occasion, and will leave here at 6.30 a. m. calling at all bay ports, and will remain at the Island about five hours. The Sunday School Parliament will be in session at the time, and an interesting time may be expected. A joint committee of the two lodges of the order in this town have the matter in hand, and the public may rely on every arrangement being made for the comfort and enjoyment of their patrons. A proclamation has been issued, granting a civic holiday in town and we anticipate a large crowd. Fare for the round trip $1, double ticket $1.50. Further particulars will be announced in a few days.

M. E. Church Cemetery.

The committee on the M. E. Church Cemetery, purpose making important and needed improvements in the grounds during the next few weeks. Among other things a substantial fence is to be built across the front of the grounds.

A Dangerous Trap.

We would direct the attention of the street inspector to a bad break in a culvert on Bridge street west, near the academy. On Wednesday night a teamster barely escaped a serious accident, and the town a long bill of damages. The matter should be looked after at once.

A Narrow Escape.

On Monday morning last Mrs. J. H. Smith, of the 3d concession of Richmond, had a very narrow escape from death by lightning. She was outside standing near the house, when the lightning struck the ground near her, tearing up the earth for some distance. Mrs. S. was stunned by the shock, but soon recovered, and will not experience any serious effects from the exceedingly close call.

Removal.

Mr. W. H. Perry has been busy during the past day or two, removing his stock to the eastern store of the Perry Block, south side of Dundas street. In a few days he will have everything in apple-pie order, and he will then have one of the most convenient stores in town. Mr. Perry always keeps the largest assortment and the best goods to be found in the market. His old customers will in future find him in his new premises, better prepared than ever to serve them to their entire satisfaction. Give him a call and see how comfortably he is located.

The 48th.

On Tuesday last, Col. Worsley was in Odessa collecting the arms and accoutrements of the 48th Battalion, which has been finally disbanded. Three companies—those of Capts. Murray, Mabee and Cox—have been allowed to retain their arms, and will be attached to the 47th, of Frontenac.—Col. Kirkpatrick. We understand that the money which was in dispute, and which caused all the ill feeling, is ordered to be handed over to the 47th, to be appropriated for the use of the band of that Battalion. It is to be regretted that the obstinacy of one or two of those engaged in the dispute should have caused this disgrace to fall upon the other members of the corps.

Prentice Boys.

A lodge of Prentice Boys was organized in the fourth concession of Richmond, on July 17th, by Bro. J. A. Pyke, of Moscow, District Master, to be known as Union Lodge, No. 6. The following are the officers for the first term:

Bro. W. R. Sexsmith, W. M.
" Tobias Sexsmith, D. M.
" Alex. Sexsmith, Sec'y.
" Hiram Aulen, Chap.
" W. R. Lowes, Treas.
" S. McKnight, D. of C.
" W. Humphries, I. T.
" W. H. Winters, O. T.
" D. A. Martin, F. C.
" H. A. Raglan,
" Byron Dalton,
" A. Hutchinson, Committee

That Peach Contract.

Some envious rivals have been endeavoring to detract from Mr. S. McLaughlin's success in the fruit business, by insinuating, on sly, that he has not the sole agency for [illegible] peaches. We have seen an agreement between the parties, in which Mr. [illegible] contracts to sell peaches only to S. McLaughlin in this county. The price paid [illegible] and if Sam is not able [illegible] good bargains this season, and at the same time make a good thing by [illegible] large quantities of this fruit, we will be very much mistaken. These parties who have not sufficient enterprise to enter into a large speculation on their own account should keep their hand over their mouth, and not make an exhibition of their envious, by trying to injure their more ambitious neighbors. Mr. McLaughlin has purchased the produce of two thousand trees, which are to be shipped to him direct from the orchard [illegible] morning. This will save the public [illegible] the imposition of having rotten fruit [illegible] upon them by commission men of [illegible]. Mr. Dunning's fruit [illegible], and the people of [illegible] an opportunity of getting fresh peaches this year for the first time, and at prices lower than ever before. Be sure and see McLaughlin's stock before buying.

Farms for Sale.

By no other class of advertisers is the value of the large circulation of The Beaver better appreciated, than by those having farms for sale. This may be accounted for by the fact that the results are more directly apparent, but it is a fact that may be fully understood by any person who takes the trouble to compare the number of these announcements which appear in our columns from week to week, with those that appear in our [illegible] contemporaries. We purpose to still further increase the value of these advertisements to those who insert them, by [illegible]

SHEFFIELD.

From our own Correspondent.

—Harvest will soon be completed.

—On Monday, 19th ult., Mr. P. McDonald, a former hotel keeper of this place, but lately a successful trapper and hunter in the back country, died at Mr. A. Wishart's, after a painful illness of three weeks. Donald was a man of considerable talent, whose wit, if it did not degenerate into coarse puns, was exceedingly lively. He had rather loose notions of conjugal relationships.

—Mr. M. S. Murphy has made a large addition to his dwelling. Having been appointed commissioner for taking affidavits, etc., the people find him convenient, ready and compliant, which is a great advantage. Formerly, all business of this kind had to be done at Tamworth, and as issuer of marriage licenses, he will be pleased to receive applications from any eligible young man wishing "to be made happy." Business strictly confidential.

—On 25th ult. Mrs. Palmatier died at the residence of her son, lot 14, 4th concession of Sheffield. She was one of the early pioneers of this township, having settled on the present farm when all around was a howling wilderness.

—After spending two weeks at the Caledonia mineral springs, Rev. [illegible] Donahue seems greatly recuperated.

—Owing to the [illegible] repairs, which were made at the [illegible] time this year, the road from Napanee to Coyne is mostly in good condition; except from lot 17 to Malone's, which is in a rough, and in some places, almost impassable state.

—Mr. Jno. J. Stewart, of New York, was visiting his parents here, renewing old friendships and associations. He returned on Wednesday, 4th inst.

—The business and mail matter is well attended to at the post office here, also the male from B. I'll not tell, John?

—Whortleberries scarce and dear.

—Some of our young ladies are very desirous to part their names in the middle.

—What has become of our school teacher? Some have it he is out in the rural district; others say, owing to the fact of his being "left," he has shut himself up like a hermit; and lastly rumor says some where near Centreville is the great point of attraction.

—Our young people have seen something in the lake, as the Echo says, that looks like the now notorious marine monster, which is said to inhabit the waters of the lakes hereabout. I do not wonder at our young people imagining they see strange objects, being at times rather poetical and imaginary—perhaps the mental faculty, stimulated by the customary "happy embrace" causes the ocular demonstration to become defective or deceptive, at any rate very unreliable. Query: is it possible that we may yet see, like Artemus Ward, an "episode?"

—Mr. N. Phalan, hotel keeper, is enjoying the hospitality and renewing old friendships at the beautiful little town of Fethard, in the old Emerald Isle, braving once more the dangers of the broad Atlantic to view his "beloved Isle of the sea."

—I regret to learn that Thomas Hooley, son of Mr. M. Hooley, after every effort being made to subdue the disease, (consumption), is fast failing.

—The advantages, and as some would imagine, the disadvantages of the additional bonus bylaw, to grant $5,000 more by this municipality, to assist in the construction of the N. T. & Q. R. R., are discussed with considerable animation. The impression prevails that the whole township will be benefited by the railway, and consequently the bylaw will carry.

Great amusement is created by a loquacious individual, who imagines himself a lone mason, astrologer, medical, ventriloquist, etc., not being a disciple of J. B. Gough, he almost daily gets overthrown at the shrine of Bacchus. MOSTA.

The matter has created considerable interest in this section, and is a pleasant "diversion" this hot weather.

—The excursion I made mention of in my last to be on the 17th, went off like a big gun. There were about 300 persons on board when they left the dock. A splendid time was had.

—The shores of our beautiful bay have resumed their usual freshness. Those little fish, of which there were millions that played beneath the millions that lay dead and dying upon the surface, while the shores were wreathed with those that were carried up with the waves, have all disappeared. Many opinions have been expressed as to the large mortality among them. Some think it must have been disease, others the heavy sea, while others say that the water is not natural to them. The latter I have no doubt is correct.

—The young people of this place have made arrangements for another entertainment. A friend of mine tells me that it will be about the last of this month. Messrs. A. Bisker, C. Fry and J. Phillips act as committee. I have no doubt they will make this interesting, and speaking from the high reputation this place bears for exhibitions, concerts and entertainments, there will certainly be a crowded house. Further notice given.

my sister Theodolinda shall find me a sheltered seat under the lee of the wind while you go over the building. Don't be long please, because [illegible] other things in our town which it is [illegible] duty to see, and I have ordered [illegible] to be ready at half past one."

La Giulietta was as good a guide as Citti himself. Armed with the old man's keys, she first took her travellers down to the gloomy dens and dark passages underground, where in olden time the beasts were caged and the captives driven forth to slaughter. Thence she led the way up flights of marble stairs and through winding corridors to the topmost range of seats. And beyond lay the smiling landscape, green and wooded, with its convent crowned heights, its villas, its vineyards, its olives and cypresses, and the purple line of the Euganean Hills, and the snowy peaks of the Italian Tyrol.

The English girls looked round for a moment in silence. Then the younger took out a small sketch book, and chose her point of view.

"You are not going to attempt to sketch [illegible] Theodolinda?" said the elder, with a slightly satirical stress on the demonstrative pronoun.

"[illegible] you know any cause or just impediment why I should not sketch it?"

"[illegible] well, because it is impossible."

"[illegible] on l'impossible," quoth the sketcher, with a cold smile, sharpening the point of her pencil. "Besides, if it [illegible] it serves to recall the scene [illegible]."

"[illegible] it were the day of final conflagration [illegible] Theodolinda," said the first speaker, impatiently. "I believe you would sit on a peak [illegible] to sketch the world in flames."

"Thanks for the suggestion. Should the [illegible] occur in my time, I will act upon [illegible]."

[illegible] strolling away with a slight shrug, the elder [illegible] mounted the platform, so not only commanding a wider horizon, but looking [illegible] down the outer wall of the Amphitheatre [illegible] like a huge cliff, plunged down, rugged, weed grown and weather stained, to the [illegible] below.

[illegible] sketcher meanwhile was busy with [illegible], the sailor leaned against the parapet [illegible] Giulietta, resting on the cool marble [illegible] a little way back stole a glance at [illegible]. The [illegible] of Romeo and Giulietta [illegible] Theodolinda, and the elder sister, from [illegible] of vantage on the platform, "do [illegible] remember that beautiful little flower [illegible] pink petals shading into violet which [illegible] and winter at the top of the Coliseum. They told us, you know that it was [illegible] the flora peculiar to the [illegible] and [illegible] elsewhere."

"[illegible] what of it?"

"Well, I see one here growing in a crevice [illegible] wall of the Amphitheatre."

"You [illegible] sure it is the same?" asked [illegible] absent [illegible] abstractedly.

"[illegible] confident of it [illegible] from this distance. I would like, it so [illegible] of reach [illegible] dear [illegible] [illegible] don't." It is too dangerous [illegible] dangerous [illegible]

[illegible] sketcher without rising [illegible] only two people where a moment [illegible] there had been three. The [illegible] herself [illegible] the direction of the lady's [illegible], perhaps gathering something of the meaning [illegible] her words, he had slung himself [illegible] over the parapet, and by help of such [illegible] and foot as he could find in the inter[illegible] and inequalities of the masonry, had [illegible] himself down to gain within reach of [illegible].

"He must have understood what you said," [illegible] Theodolinda, coolly.

[illegible] the other sister—realizing what must [illegible] if the man's nerve or muscle failed [illegible] her breath, closed her eyes and [illegible].

[illegible] Giulietta meanwhile leaned over breathless. She also realized the man's peril [illegible] she neither closed her eyes nor felt the [illegible] of terror. She saw that he was [illegible] and cool, and she admired his careless [illegible] so that she feared his danger [illegible] her cheek paled somewhat as he went [illegible] and still lower. His right hand [illegible] between the broken joints of the [illegible] held on but a little way below the parapet. His right knee rested in a [illegible] down. His left foot was planted [illegible] edge of a still lower crack. His left [illegible] was stretched down to pluck the flower [illegible].

[illegible] the flower was just a little beyond his [illegible]. He bent lower, and as he bent, the veins of his right hand stood out, and the [illegible] showed white below the skin. The [illegible] life hung by that hand.

The Englishwoman, opening her eyes for a moment, uttered a faint exclamation. The girl snatched off her little kerchief, twisted it into a rope, and with ready presence of mind held it loopwise, at arm's length over the edge of the parapet.

He did not see it. He saw nothing but that tiny pink blossom quivering in the breeze [illegible] an inch below his fingers.

He would surely not attempt to go lower! He paused steadied himself by a [illegible] of the knee, shifted the fingers of the right hand slowly, cautiously, as an organ player shifts his fingers on the holding notes and worked his way an inch or two lower.

Now his fingers touched the weed! Now, [illegible] as carefully as if he were gathering it from a rock by the roadside he loosens it [illegible] and draws it out, root and all, takes it in [illegible] and, grasping the masonry with [illegible] grip, hoists himself hand over hand [illegible] gets both on the edge of the parapet.

And now, his head having not yet cleared the level, he looks up for the first time—looks up and meets the girl's eyes looking down. [illegible] one second their two faces are scarce a [illegible] feet apart—in hers a tremulous [illegible] in his, something that sends the [illegible] blood in a torrent not merely to her cheek but over her throat and brow. She draws back hastily. The next instant he has swung himself over, alighted on his feet, picked up his hat, presented the coveted blossom to the lady on the platform.

"Oh, thank you! [illegible]! But how could you run such a dreadful risk—and for a mere flower?" stammered the Englishwoman, making a vague dash at a word or two of Italian. "It was too dangerous—troppo pericoloso, you know!"

He smiled, and made a gesture of dissent.

"You must have understood what I said—do you speak English?"

"A little, signora."

"Well, you are a brave man; but a brave man should not risk his life for nothing."

"It was no risk, signora."

The Englishwoman's purse was in her hand.

"I—I am very much obliged to you," she said, hesitatingly.

But our sailor was not one of those who take money for little courtesies.

"At your service, signora," he said, touching his hat and turning away.

"It is the very same flower—I was sure of it," said the lady, rejoining her sister. "And see, he has had the good sense to get it out by the roots. But it was dreadfully dangerous. I shall never think of it without a shudder."

"I dare say it was not half so dangerous as it looked," replied the sketcher, intent on the curvature of her cords. "Remember that Arab who ran at full speed from the top to the bottom of the second Pyramid at Ghizeh."

"Ah, well, he does it every day, and gets his living by it. This man would not let me offer him a penny. But what strange animal have we here?"

"An early Christian, I should say, dug up from some of those underground places we were in just now."

It was old Citti, carrying a bundle of shawls and feebly bowing.

"And you, my blessed child," he said, turning to La Giulietta—"you can now go home, for my customer is gone. And he has bought all my Roman coins—at my own price too. Don't I always say that you bring me luck?"

The girl was not sorry to be released. So she took the pass key, dropped her courtesy to the ladies, and tripped away down the great marble staircases and gloomy passages that had rung so often in olden days to the rush and roar of thousands.

CHAPTER XI.

LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT.

"Will you let me out at the same time, bella Giulietta?"

"You know my name?"

That he should follow her was not surprising. She had, perhaps, some instinctive foreknowledge that he would do so. But that he should call her by her name! This startled her.

"How should I not know it?"

"But you are a stranger."

"Am I a stranger?"

"I never saw you in my life, till I let you into the Amphitheatre."

The sailor looked at her, gravely smiling.

"I stood close to you for some time this morning, at the book stall in the Piazza dei Signori," he said. "You were buying that ballad that I saw you reading just now—the ballad of Romeo and Giulietta. Will you show it to me?"

"I have not time," she said, shyly.

He was walking beside her—walking slowly as if to prolong the conversation.

"Pray not so fast," he said—for she was quickening her pace. "I have much to say to you."

"What can you have to say to me? I do not know you."

"I have as much to say to you as that Romeo in your ballad had to say to Giulietta the night of their first meeting. I do not ask if you know the story."

"I have known it from childhood—every word of it."

"They fell in love at first sight, bella Giulietta."

Still hastening, she looked away.

"There are those who say that love so kindled is the only real love. What do you think, dear donzella?"

"I have never thought about it."

"May I tell you what I think? Nay, listen to me for an instant. I think that, somewhere or another in the wide world, every human soul has its fellow soul, and that these two—created for each other—too often spend their whole lives seeking, wandering, yet never meeting. But when two such fellow souls do meet, then they recognize one another on the instant—know that they belong to one another, at once and forever. That is the only heaven born love—that is love at first sight. And it was so that Romeo and Giulietta fell in love, here in Verona, five hundred years ago. Their eyes met, and their souls were reunited."

"But they were strangers, for all that."

"Nay, then, what is it, after all, to be strangers? What does it mean? It means want of sympathy, want of trust, want of mutual knowledge. Are you and I strangers?"

"I think so."

"And I think—not so. Are you not Giulietta, and am I not Romeo?"

The color flew to her face.

"Is that your name?" she said. Then, drawing back mistrustfully, "Ah, no. You jest. You are not Romeo."

"Indeed I do not jest. I am Romeo—for you, if you will have it so."

They had just come to one of the open arches. He pointed to the blue hills far away.

"Look," he said. "You have know all this from your childhood—as long as you can remember. Yet have you not sometimes felt as if your memory was older than yourself—as if you had seen the sunset on those mountains long [illegible] ago, at other times than ours?"

"I never heard any one talk as you talk," she said, wonderingly.

"Were you born in that old house in the Via Cappello?"

"I have lived there as long as I can remember anything," she replied, "but I was not born there. I was born at Cologonola, up in the hill country, among my father's people. My father and mother both died when I was a little child."

"And you have lived since then with your uncle, who is a wheelwright?"

"How do you know that? How do you know that I live in the Via Cappello?"

"One need not be a sorcerer to discover that," he answered. "Besides, where should La Giulietta live, if not in the house of her forefathers? But will you not let me see your ballad? By whom is it supposed to be sung—by the lover or the lady? What! not one glimpse, fair Giulietta? You are obdurate."

"Indeed, I can not stay. Listen! the clocks are striking! It is already nine."

"A moment longer! Does it seem strange to you that I dare to talk to you of love—I, who never saw you till to-day? To me it is not strange. All my life long I have been dreaming of the woman I could love. I have waited for her till I was weary of waiting. I have sought for her till I was weary of seeking. And now, now at last, dear Giulietta, my waiting is rewarded, my dreams have come true."

He took her hand, and for a moment she let it rest in his before she withdrew it.

"Did that lady ask you to get her the flower?" she asked, presently.

"No, but she said to her sister that she wished for it. We sailors climb, you know, like cats; and to gather it was easy. I only wish the flower had been for you."

"And you understood her foreign tongue?"

"Enough for that. I have sailed many seas, and eaten the bread of many nations. It would be strange if I had not picked up a few words here and there."

He had sailed many seas! A man whose home was on the deep; here to-day, and gone to-morrow. She knew a girl up at Cologonola who married a sailor; and when they had been two months wedded, the sailor joined his ship, and went away to sea. That was three years ago; and to this day the girl knew not whether she was wife or widow.

All at once she felt his breath upon her hand—the hand which held the key. She drew it back quickly.

"No, cara," he said, "I was not going to kiss it. I could not so much as kiss the hem of your garment by stratagem. But what is the matter?"

"Cielo! [illegible] hear the clocks? Another quarter gone, and the day's work not to do! What will Uncle Stefano say to me when I take him the key?"

Giulietta herself never ran more swiftly when the clock struck twelve than La Giulietta now ran down the time worn steps and echoing corridors. If the sailor had not been as good at running as at climbing, he would have found it a hard matter to keep up with her. In vain, as he ran, he entreated her not to mind about the key. She might leave it with him, and he would take care that old Citti had it safely when the travellers left.

But she only shook her head, and ran the faster.

"When shall I see you again?" he asked, as they traversed the last passage.

"How can I tell?"

"Will you go to market in the morning? Ah, no—I remember. There will be no market again till Thursday. Will you come here—to the Arena?"

"No, no—impossible!"

"Perhaps you may be going to mass?"

"To mass!—on a week-day morning! Do you take me for a fine lady?"

"Well, then, to vespers? Surely you sometimes go to vespers?"

"Sometimes—not often."

"You will go to vespers to-morrow, dear donzella?" he urged. "Say that you will. Where shall it be? At San Zenone? You will not? So! it turns at last!—shall I not take charge of the key?"

But the girl—besides that she had left her basket in the workshop—would not give up her trust. She had promised to leave the key in Uncle Stefano's hands, and that she must do, to the letter.

"Then it is Addio—but not for long," he said, as he locked the door on the outside and gave her back the key.

She lifted her dark lashes, gave him one shy, swift glance, whispered, "Addio," and was gone.

Then he stood looking after her till [illegible] reached the fifth archway to the [illegible] which [illegible] Stefano's workshop.

"And neither he nor she observed how the driver of a passing vettura checked his horse to stare at them, witnessed their parting, and then—having a fare inside and a load of luggage on the roof—whipped on savagely, with rage in his head and an oath between his teeth."

She had never said "Addio" to Tonio Moretti with such a look as that!

To be continued.

To gain the public confidence is essential to business success, and it can only be gained by a steady course of faithful dealing with them. It is by this course that Messrs. Tuckett & Billings have secured the great success of their "Myrtle Navy" tobacco. This confidence is not only a source of business to the firm, but also a source of economy which the consumers get the benefit of. The merchant never loses a moment of time in examining the quality of the tobacco. The name fixes the quality as absolutely as the mint stamp fixes the value of the guinea. It is not even necessary for the commercial traveller's trunk to be burdened with a sample of "Myrtle Navy," all his customers know what it is, and know in an instant when it has been supplied. There is no room for any dispute about it. No waste of time or postage in writing complaints about it. These may look like trifles to the unnatural, but they save money, and enable merchants to perform the work of distribution at the smallest possible cost. They are part of the reasons why the finest quality of tobacco grown can be sold at so cheap a price.

Ague Conqueror Will Cure.

There is no disease or affliction more dreaded than the ordinary Fever and Ague of this country and yet it is one of the most dreaded. In fact, in some persons, Fever and Ague, Intermittent, Remittent, and Bilious Fevers, if continued, bring on other diseases which eventually prove very difficult to cure, and sometimes result in death. The Ague Conqueror, although a vegetable preparation, containing no poison, has never failed to cure any case of Ague within our knowledge, and the chills do not return during that season. Price 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle. To make a permanent cure of a difficult case it will require a $1.00 bottle to cleanse the system and leave the Liver and other organs in a healthy condition so that the chills will not return. Sold by all druggists and dealers everywhere.

False Impression.

It is generally supposed by physicians and the people generally that Dyspepsia can not invariably be cured, but we are pleased to say that Green's August Flower has never, to our knowledge, failed to cure Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint in all its forms, such as Sour stomach, Costiveness, Sick Headache, palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, bad taste in the mouth, &c. Out of the 30,000 dozen Bottles sold last year, not a single failure was reported, but thousands of complimentary letters received from Druggists of wonderful cures. "Old Fogy" is the proper name for the merchant who keeps the balance of one season's stock over for the next, because he can't get price enough. Nothing like commencing each season with a fresh clean stock.

Our Clearing Sale has been so far Very Successful.

People are amazed at the LOW PRICES, and we are more than pleased at the confidence with which customers come in and ask for goods advertised, and we never disappoint them, except when some lines were sold out, such as Black lace Shawls worth $2.50, for 25 cents, of which we had a large quantity, but so great was the rush that they vanished in two days.

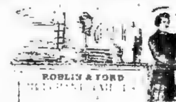
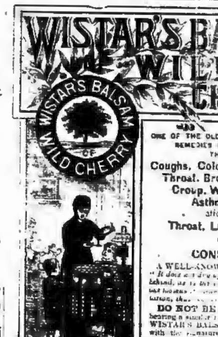
ROBLIN & FORD'S ADVT.





A Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron. Is as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. When the blood does not contain the usual quantity of iron the deficiency can be supplied by the use of the PERUVIAN SYRUP. It cures "a thousand ills" simply by Toning Up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the system. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon. This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing

Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Boils, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhoea, Nervous Affections, Female Complaints,

And all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility, or a low state of the system.

CAUTION.—Be sure you get the "PERUVIAN SYRUP." Sold by druggists generally. Pamphlets sent free to any address by Seth W. Fowle & Sons, Proprietors, 86 Harrison Avenue, Boston, Mass.
